A BAD SYSTEM.

An effort is being made to revive and extend the system of insuring employers against loss by reason of the dishonesty of employees. Under it the employee pays the cost of the guarantee—that is, he takes out the policy and pays the premium installments.

It is a bad system, with wholly unfounded condemnation. It is promoted in the interest of a low class of insurance companies. So able a paper as the Chicago Journal favors it, because, according to its philosophy, it creates a sense of responsibility among employees; promotes economy and careful personal habits; weakens the disposition to use the employer's money; makes all the employee a check upon each other; restrains speculation, and adds to the safety of institutions holding the money or property of others.

These are plausible arguments, but they will not stand the test of reason. The whole system is based on the base assumption that every employee is dishonest. It is, therefore, utterly destructive of every element of human trust. It cuts the employer free from responsibility for his habits and methods, and thus takes away from the honest clerk that to which he is entitled, the trust, regard and sympathy of his employer and colleagues.

But it does more, it tends to make employers dishonest, since they must realize that their defalcation will not injure the employer, but operate only to reduce the profits of the insurance company. Hence, instead of making employees prudent and careful, it will tend to make them careless and reckless.

Some of these points have been elaborated by the Chicago Current, which enters a many protest against the fallacies of the reasoning in support of the system. But the gravest, and to our mind the best entrenched objection, is that we have already stated—the system is utterly destructive of human trust. On this character is built up; on this the ambition of the employee feels; it is oftened that the world credits a greater incentive to the employee than the wages for which he toils; the approval of his employer is to him a generous stimulant with no reactionary effects. But how can he value that approval, or deem it sincere, when he realizes that his principal is fortified and secured in by the cold policy of guarantee locked in his safe?

The system is simply infamous, for it is a new rendering of that old proverb of the devil, "honesty is the best policy." It is a system, as the Current well says, that contributes to the further enslavement of the souls of employees. "These guarantee companies are for the benefit of incompetent and indolent directors who fail in their supervision which the statutes of the law and the dictates of morality urge upon them." True, and hence their influence is all directed to the lowering of the business standard of integrity.

To insure the honesty of an employee is putting a policy in the place of conscience, and a premium of insurance in the place of soul, seems to us more reasonable, if not desirable, than to demand a policy to insure the virtue of the betrothed, or the chastity of the wife. We need to cultivate honesty for honesty's sake, virtue for honor's sake, and one must indeed be "its own reward." When for integrity we substitute the lavish claims of insurance, we add one more temptation to profligacy and knock from beneath the employee the last prop of self-respect that the hard business world has left him.

AN EXAMPLE FOLLOWED.

One of the best evidences of the wisdom of the late action of the people of northern California, in holding a Convention to plan means to advance material interests, is found in the action now being taken in the San Joaquin valley. On the 9th instant, at Fresno, a Convention is to be held, headed the call—

"To seek the best means of encouraging immigration to the San Joaquin valley. The northern and southern sections of the State are prepared and hard at work doing all they can, and adding to our advantages this end, and where we have the garden spot of the State, why not present our advantages and resources in their true light at the World's Fair at New Orleans?"

The same broad and liberal spirit that characterized the Sacramento Convention of September 16th, and the representative men of the northern counties comprising it, is manifested in the Fresno Convention, success will attend the effort. We are central and northern California are to have a competitor in the "new movement." It is a matter for congratulation. While the people of northern California propose to advance their own claims as superior to all others, they are alive to the fact that like labor in other sections will indirectly aid their own. Our interest is in the whole State; we wish to see even geographical distinctions prosper; the more workers there are to the common end the better; the more immigration societies there are wisely and honestly conducted, the better will California be advertised abroad; the more prominence will her advantage secure before the world, and the greater will be the tide of immigration, the growth of manufacturers and the more rapid the development of her varied resources. The labors of our friends of the San Joaquin valley will aid the people of the Sacramento valley. In turn, we do to advance our own interests must contribute in some degree to the welfare of the people of the San Joaquin. The movement in the latter section should serve to give renewed energy to that in our own. There is life in competition, especially that generous rivalry which alone should be cultivated between the two sections.

The suggestion of the Record-Union, that the Chinese quarter should be changed, meets with general approval. There can be no question but that the sober judgment of the people of Sacramento favors the obliteration of the eyesore on the north of the city. Why should this people be forced to endure the nuisance? It is a constant reproach; it offends the sight of all who pass through the city. If we can't do it, let the Chinese do it.

Dr. Kimball was in favor of the change.

The Convention adjourned to 10:30 this morning.

The Convention assembled at 10:30 this morning.

The Committee on Order of Business reported that the attendance was not large. It had concluded that it was best to take up the consideration of the proposed bill at a later date.

Miracles of Healing Un-

History.

"I have been afflicted for twenty years with obstinate skin diseases, caused by S. M. S.'s perfume and other articles. I applied my scalp, and in spite of all my efforts, the disease would not go away. I was told to wash my hair with Cuticura, and covered my entire person in four dr. doses.
For the last three years I have made use of Cuticura, and the disease has disappeared.
Every morning there could be nearly a dus-tiful amount taken from the sheet on the back of the tongue, and applied to the part to be treated. I am now perfectly well, and can go about without any relief." — John McCullough's Failure.

CHICAGO, September 30th.—As a result to the success of Cuticura in the treatment of the skin, when John McCullough essayed the part of Spartacus in "The Gladiators," and only successfully escaped being put to death, he announced this morning announces that the engagement of Mr. McCullough is closed.
